Holidays
HOLIDAYS GUIDE

Children and adults with rare chromosome and genome disorders often have complex additional needs impacting on all aspects of their own and their family’s lives. They may require dedicated intensive care, therapies, items of equipment and services. All this makes it even more important that they and their carers, have the opportunity to take a well-deserved holiday or short break either together or individually. Yet accommodating these complexities often makes these holidays and breaks more difficult to arrange. Carers of children and adults with a rare chromosome disorder often approach the team at Unique to ask for information and guidance on how they might organise a holiday or short break. Sometimes they are able to sort a holiday but cannot find a travel insurance company willing to cover their child’s special needs and medical issues. Having talked to lots of different parents and carers about what they need, we have decided to write this guide to illustrate some of the different types of specialist holidays and short breaks that are currently available and to signpost carers to potential sources of help, including funding and travel insurance. The guide is intended as a resource to help families find suitable holiday opportunities, research that can be very time-consuming and hard work, particularly when you are caring for a disabled person. In this guide we have included details of a selection of organisations providing holidays both in the UK and abroad. We are not able to recommend one holiday type over another, so when following any links we provide, it is important for you to study the information given by each organisation carefully to make sure they provide the sort of service you are seeking. Some will accept self-referrals while others will require referrals from a professional involved in your relative’s care. Don’t be frightened to ask professionals for help. Many of Unique’s parent carers have been given invaluable assistance in organising wonderful holidays that have enabled them to holiday as a family, or on their own and that have made all the difference to their capacity to continue in their caring roles. This guide is a dynamic resource and the details included are correct at the time of publication. However, if you should you come across any new sources of holiday help that we haven’t included, please contact Unique to tell us about them. We are always pleased to receive new information that we can pass on to carers of children and adults with rare chromosome and genome disorders. This guide is just a starting point and included details of various holiday service providers you might want to consider but it isn’t an exhaustive list. If you have internet access, begin with a thorough search, using terms like ‘holidays for disabled children or adults’ and you will be able to find a variety of different holiday providers. It’s amazing the amount of information you can access through simple searches on Google, Bing, Yahoo! and other search engines. Other parents and carers are always a good source of information too so consider joining one of our Unique Facebook groups to connect with others and ask about holidays that they may have had. We often find they are a mine of information.... you just have to ask!
“Finding the right holiday is so complicated. Wherever we go we have to always check out the safety of the place we are staying in. If self-catering - for example: Do the windows open wide and if so, can you lock them with a key? How does the door to the outside open, does it have a safety catch? Is there a garden and if so does it have a pond, pool, or low fences? And then there is all the kit that we have to take with us like enough nappies and medication to cover the length of our stay, toys, equipment, etc, sometimes you wonder if it’s worth going!”
Holidays in the UK

Many families prefer to ‘stay close to home’ and holiday in the UK and would not like to risk venturing abroad because of their children’s special needs and medical conditions, so in this guide we have included a variety of organisations providing holidays closer to home. Don’t forget that, rather than taking your own equipment from home, you might be able to hire specialist equipment like hoists and cot sides in a resort with the help of the holiday organisers. If the thought of a long journey with a child or adult in pads is daunting, then think about planning your route or your holiday so you can access specialist Changing Places toilets – see www.changing-places.org for details of where to find these excellent changing facilities. Do you want to know about a potential destination and the facilities available before you make your final holiday venue decision? Why not ask Unique to put you in touch with families living in the area in which you are intending to holiday? With the comprehensive Unique database/registry listing many thousands of families affected by rare chromosome and genome disorders, we may well know of someone you can talk to. There is nothing like the knowledge and experience of a local family to tap into for information about their area, including hospitals, doctors and pharmacists in case of emergencies when you get there. A well-planned holiday will take a lot of the stress out of preparation and going to new places with a vulnerable child.

In this guide we have listed just some of the many holiday and short break ideas available to give you inspiration! The organisations listed are not in any particular order, they are organisations that we have learnt about through research, from other charities, through Unique member families caring for their children and from our own experiences. Inclusion here does not mean we are endorsing them.

Please contact our Family Support Officer (see www.rarechromo.org for details) if you have any queries.

“We would recommend getting one of the lounges as it is very quiet in there and you don’t have the crowds around duty free. If there is a delay, you can still stay in the lounge where they have food and drinks. They were kind enough to put c-beebies on for us. The prices are pretty reasonable (about £18 per person) - www.holidayextras.com”
Cruise Dialysis offers a wide range of cruises with haemodialysis onboard to suit everyone’s taste and budget. An experienced dialysis team and nephrologist are onboard throughout your cruise so you can be assured of the best attention at all times.

Can Be Done Holidays offer a wide range of holidays for all, but have specialised in original and pioneering wheelchair accessible holidays to a widening choice of destinations.

Virgin Holidays Special Assistance Team help to provide holidays to suit everyone. Whether you have mobility restrictions or medical requirements.

SNOW SPORT HOLIDAYS

Disabled skiing and snowboarding (also known as adaptive snowsports) have become a lot more widespread in recent years, as more organisations develop to enable people with disabilities to enjoy snowsports. The success of British skiers at the 2012 Winter Paralympics in Sochi also helped to raise the sport’s profile and inspire more disabled people to give snowsports a go. A great place to look for information and to find out more about how to get involved is:

⇒ Disability Snowsport UK www.disabilitysnowsport.org.uk/
It’s an organisation that offers information and advice to anyone who wants to gain access to disabled skiing opportunities or learn more about them.

“We have flown many times and something we find important is to never put anything in overhead lockers that you might need during the flight - we had an “interesting” experience of not being able to access something as our bag had got pushed to the back by other people’s luggage - leading to a meltdown just before we took off! We try to keep bags with us under the seat in front now.”

FINANCIAL HELP & GRANTS FOR HOLIDAYS
Living in a family who have a person with a rare chromosome disorder, and the additional financial demands and limited income this might bring, sometimes means that being able to pay for a much-needed holiday is not easy, or is downright impossible. There are sources of help though and many of our families have managed to enjoy lovely holidays and short breaks, thanks to the financial help of a variety of organisations. Here are just a few to get you started. If you need any more information, please see our separate guide on Grants and funding, which is available to download from our website www.rarechromo.org

ORGANISATIONS HELPING CARERS TO HAVE A HOLIDAY

♦ The Respite Association
  www.respiteassociation.org
  01775 820176  Email: help@respiteassociation.org
  The Respite Association was formed by a group of people, with first-hand experience of the stress put on carers. They provide short term assistance in the funding of appropriately qualified respite care for disabled, sick, elderly or terminally ill persons in order that their regular carer can be allowed to take a much-needed break.

♦ The Ogilvie Trust http://theogilvietrust.org.uk
  01394 388746 Email: info@ogilviecharities.org.uk
  Grants are made to support respite holidays for carers. The main aim is to give a complete break to a carer while the person cared for is receiving respite care. In exceptional circumstances they may assist where the carer and cared for wish to holiday together, provided they are husband and wife or partners, or an adult child caring for an aged parent or vice versa. Applications must be made via a third party with no self-referral.

♦ The Kiloran Trust
  020 7602 7404 Email: kiltrust@aol.com
  A large welcoming house in west London in which carers can go for a Respite Care Break away from Caring. Kiloran is for unpaid carers looking after a relative or friend at home (husband, wife, child, parent, sibling) who requires full time commitment to their care. Carers are offered a break from Monday – Saturday in this house, which is informal, friendly, warm and relaxed. All meals are provided. The cost, which is subsidised, includes a room with en-suite and meals. If you have a low income or claim income support the trust can help to obtain funding to cover this amount. Not wheelchair accessible. All bedrooms situated above ground floor. No lift.

♦ Revitalise http://revitalise.org.uk/respite-holidays/
  0303 303 0145  Email: bookings@revitalise.org.uk
  Revitalise breaks are holidays for disabled people and carers. They offer a break for disabled people and also for carers. They provide care but are not a care home! They provide respite holidays for disabled people and carers aged 18 or over. Carers can have a break too, but they do not have to. They are more than welcome to go along with the person they care for and have a proper holiday too, whilst Revitalise take over the care.
YOUNG CARERS

  Email: enquiries@theolivercurdtrust.co.uk
  Facebook: www.facebook.com/olivercurdtrust/
  The Oliver Curd Trust was set up by Oliver’s parents Richard and Sarah, in memory of their son Oliver, is a registered charity that offers short breaks to children and families with life threatening or life limiting illnesses. They own two holiday homes in East Sussex, one at Crowhurst Park, Battle and one at Combe Haven, St Leonards on Sea. The holidays are completely free for families (you just need to fund travel and food). The holiday homes are available for families with a child up to 18 years, facilities may be limited for more severely disabled children as the door spaces are standard caravan size only. Most of the families that stay have limited wheelchair use so it is not a problem, but for a child who is permanently in a wheelchair with their own personalised chair they may have trouble getting access to the caravans.

Summary

In this guide we have responded to feedback from our members who tell us that finding suitable holidays to accommodate their special needs is difficult and often very expensive (beyond their means) and that searching for information about potential sources of help takes lots of time - time that is very precious when you are caring for a disabled child. We have described some of the sources of help that are out there and talked about the things you might need to think about when planning your holiday. Unique staff are available if you wish to discuss things first and although we don’t provide advice, our team includes carers of disabled children themselves, so will understand your needs as a carer. The guide accompanies two others, one relating to bikes, trikes and sensory toys (Sports and Leisure) and the other is on grants and funding. Finally, don’t be too shy or too proud to ask for help from the organisations we have listed. That’s their reason for being - they want to help disabled children, adults and their carers to live more fulfilling and less stressful lives.
Happy Holidays!
